Nose in Excitement.

Sloux City Tribune: Fresh from a 700-mile overland automobile trip to Dallas, C. M. Wyckoff, Fred Redline and L. A. McCarter of the Wykoff Sioux City last night and the tales years. they tell today of their experiences do credit to a full fledged disciple of Izaak Walton. While they did not start out to startle the natives or inftlate the unsophisticated, still they did manage to give one western cowboy a different species of thrills than he had ever before experienced.

Just as the Sioux City parly was drawing into Bonesteel, a long, heavy. store. ily loaded train bound for Gregory was pulling out. A long, lank cowhoy dressed in typical western fashion rushed around the corner and made a mad dash after the moving train, The auto slowed down to watch the race The crowd of loafers around the platform became interested speciators and a score of bets were instantly W. E. Huyett Pays $10 for Hitting Conlaid. It was a pretty race, but after running several blocks, the cowboy came back, disgusted and cussing.

Taking pily on him, Wyckoff called to him to climb in the back seat and they would beat the train yet. Vault ing into the seat as he would into ? saddle, he called out "Lot her go," and Driver McCarter put on full speed The road lay parallel to the tracks and ran for several miles without a turn. The auto whizzed along at a 50-mile clip and rapidly gained on the train, caught up with and ran by its side.

The cowboy, jumping to his feet took off his wide sombrero and, as the car rushed past, let out a series of that he was compelled to leave the whoops and yells of derision. But, at this dramatic moment, the machine struck a curve in the road and Mr Cowboy, sombrero and all, made an instantaneous connection with mother earth. When they slowed down to pick him up, they found no bones broken, but a badly disfigured and lacerated and much shaken cowboy. He soon recovered his equanimity however, and said he had ridden al kinds of bucking broncos, outlaws, and everything that a man could ride, but none of them came up to the four wheeled devil wagons, and when the left him at Gregory he seemed real insulted that they refused a $5 bill.

The last they saw of him he was making his way toward the places of Council Bluffs, Omaha and Dallas, He registration, elbowing his way through the crowds.

BROUGHT OLD LOVERS TOGETHER

Meet in Tripp Rush and Are Wed at Madison.

Madison Post: A rather romantic wedding was performed at the court house Wednesday afternoon when Judge Bates joined in holy wedlock the lives of Heiko R. Merlien of Sioux City and Miss Kathryn Metzgar of St. James, Minnesota. The young people came down from Norfolk on the noon train Wednesday and went to the Madison house for dinner. After dinner Mr. Merlien inquired his way to the court house and a big, strong, husky, good looking at the Junction today. Instead of bechap, and he was well dressed and looked every inch a gentleman. He J. ductor With Lantern

Rather than remain in jall awaiting the appearance of a complaining wit ness, W. E. Hyeit, an extra brakeman on the Northwesteen during the Roseand rush, charged with assaulting Conductor Fairbanks, pleaded gailty to ussault and battery Saturday. He was tilted $10 and costs by Justice diseley, which he paid.

Huyett was accused of striking Confuctor Falrbanks with a fantern Frifay night on a Dallas train after it ar ived here and was on its way to the Junction. The blow from the lantern injured Fairbank's eye so severely train at Scribner and have a docto attend to it.

Conductor Fairbanks was to have appeared against Huvelt Saturday, but for some reason failed to do so. Rather than stay longer in fail Huyett decided to plead guilty and secure his release. This was satisfactory to Chief of Police Peters, who was not disposed to hold the prisoner any onger unless a formal charge was placed against him. Huyett related a semingly straightforward story to the court regarding the matter. His story was that he had served under Fairbanks since Ocober 6 as un extra brakeman during the rush; that his run was between regarded Fairbanks highly and would not intentionally injure him. On the rip down from Dallas Huyett took several drinks of whiskey from a bottle which a passenger offered him. The ocal trainmaster's office was informed of this unbecoming conduct, and an order was wired back to put Huyett off of the train, which order was received at the Norfolk depot. In pursuance of this order Conductor Fairbanks seized Huyett, according to the latter's story, and tried to throw him off of the train as it was pulling towards the Junction. Huyett was on towns the same sort of wares are sold. the platform at the time Fairbanks tried to put him off. In the scuffle many sandwiches and pieces of pie are Huyett claims that he struck Fairanks in the eye with his lantern. He Congregational church ladies have then fell or was thrown off of the train ime the train slowed down to go in on the switch at the Junction Wye, A on the face indicated that he had been struck.

When Huyett came to the Junction depot he was placed under arrest by Officer Miller and a Northwestern de-ective and brought to town. No explanation was given for the failure of Conductor Fairbanks to an pear against Huyett, except that he was hurt and couldn't get here.

Huyert was a brotherhood brake nan, his card being issued from Wilmington, Del. He was one of many extra brakemen and flagmen employed temporarily by the Northwestern during the rush.

Huyett's fanciful story of being thrown from a moving train was declared false by Northwestern officers ing thrown from a moving train W. by Conductor Fairbanks after the rain's arrival at the Junction, and that the train was at a standstill at surrendering the lantern Huyett Fremont Herald: White on his run Wednesday afternoon Conductor lames Russell of the Northwestern, who lives in Fremont, was badly cut about the face and body by a knife in the hands of an indignant landseeker. Though the wounds are painful they are not serious.

When the train was nearing Norfolk he passenger, who is said to have peen drinking heavily, complained to the conductor about a ticket and an erroneous transfer. Some heated words followed, and the landsecker attacked Conductor Russell with a knife. Members of the crew and some of the passengers immediately interferred, but not in time to prevent the enraged man from slashing his victim several times.

Who Will Be Postmaster.

The local Democracy is stirred. It is not stirred by patriotism, by hope or ambition. It is stirred by alarm. Nor is it alarm at impending de feat which excites the loyal hosts of the "neerless leader." They think they are going to win and the thought frightens them. Norfolk Democrats have been talkng so confidently of victory that they have at last come to believe that they are going to carry the state, nation and district. And the minute they came to believe this, really believe it. which was either yesterday or the day before, the paramount issue changed.

Who Will Be Postmaster? Forgotten is the guaranty of Republican bank deposits. Forgotten is the injunction issue. Forgotten is the ariff, as forgotten as government ownership and "16 to 1."

"Suppose we win?" asks the local Democracy and stands aghast at the idea. There would be fat jobs to go around but wouldn't the other fellow get them?

Who is "it?"

"Who is 'it' anyway?" local Demorats are asking. Is it the Norfolk Bryan club? Or is the county central committee? Will President Friday of the Bryan inn have the official ear? Or will Chairman John F. Flynn of the county central committee? Or will Dr. Bear as the town's leading Democrat, deeide local matters?

"John Flynn has been twice chair man of the county committee and I fear that John labors not alone for the love of the cause," wailed a local Democrat last night to a select company.
